VoiceAbility Community Groups

VoiceAbility community groups bring people together who have common interests so that they can discuss specific issues and come up with solutions.

VoiceAbility community groups aim to:

- inform people of their rights
- enable people to have a voice that is heard, and their views understood
- improve confidence in asking questions or raising concerns
- support people to contribute to making positive change, improvements to culture and practice, and challenge any discrimination
- connect people in their local communities
- enable people to have a voice that is heard, and their views understood

We run community group meetings across Scotland, come along to our sessions to get involved.
